Last year we reported our schools from August 1, 1898, to February 15, 1900, in order that the school work for the year should close at the same time with other business of the town. Hence for this year our report dates from February 15, 1900, to February 15, 1901; thus avoiding former misunderstandings, as the report to the state is made on or before August 1 of each year.

The number of pupils between the ages of five and sixteen years as per truant officer's enumeration April, 1900, was 163; girls 87, boys 76. Number of pupils registered during the year, 235, girls 128, boys 107.

At the beginning of this, the twentieth century, we pause to take a retrospective glance at the year which so recently ushered out the nineteenth century. Much has been said, written and taught, in recent years relative to improvements, discoveries and consequent advancement in all directions; agriculture, science, literature and art; that which was thought impossible, having been accomplished, in many instances with such comparative ease, the American people have almost lost the emotion of surprise, with them—"All things seem possible."

And, while in our schools steady progress has been made, is it commensurate with progress in other directions? In these later years radical changes have been made in the curriculum of the common schools; the course of study has been modified in some branches, enlarged in others, so that added subjects absorb a part of the pupil's time, in some instances, detrimental to the fundamental, and as such more important studies.

"The three R's—Reading, 'Riting and 'Rithmetic"—at one time the highest branches taught, still occupy a place, but we query if the drill in them is what it should be. In a recent magazine article, Dean Briggs says, "I doubt whether we can do better for our children than, first, to drill them in a few subjects, mostly old ones." With this desire uppermost, that the fundamental principles of education should be thoroughly engrafted in the pupils mind, great attention has been devoted to them. Should the pupil desire to attain the highest branches taught, he will accomplish it and be better prepared to do so.

An impetus seems to have been given to, and an increased interest manifested in our schools; teachers, pupils, parents and school board, working in unison with one motive;—The advancement of education.

Much is taught to-day, with gratifying results, that was unknown twenty years ago in rural schools: Physiology, Civil government, Music, Drawing, etc.

Teachers meetings have been held, and well attended, where methods of instruction were logically discussed. Great interest was shown particularly in the different methods of teaching reading which is in itself the corner stone of education. To be able to study effectively a pupil must be able to read well. As a result a marked improvement is shown in that branch of study. A change has been made in the Readers, introducing the New Progressive, in which are found drills and suggestions on emphasis, inflection, modulation, pauses, etc., all of which are involved in good oral expression.

Teachers and members of the school board have attended institutes, thus endeavoring to keep in touch with the best methods, for the best is none too good, for the children of Candia. The latest maps by the Royal Geographical Survey, now adorn the school rooms; these with map drawing have rendered the study of geography more effective. The American Word Book, introduced last year, has been eminently successful in connection with language work.

A generous appropriation made at the school meeting of 1900, gave tangible evidence that the community was in touch with the movement to improve schools and school buildings, and the committee has endeavored to expend it with economy, and to secure the best results. At the beginning of the year it was practically decided that a term of High school would be held, in accordance with the expressed desire of many at school meeting, hence longer terms were held in the schools, that the appropriation should be as equally distributed as possible. Meanwhile a thorough canvass was made to ascertain how many would attend a High school. Only a possible twenty-one were found; of these, some would not attend at the Corner, others at the Village, and still others at the Hill. It was therefore deemed best to open seven schools, of seven weeks each, located in districts where all pupils could attend, that would go to winter schools.

The registers show a marked improvement in attendance, with comparatively few tardy, or dismissal marks, which would seem to prove the efficiency of the Truant By-law adopted at the last school meeting.

In no instance has there been dissatisfaction, but parents and guardians have worked with the teachers and committee to sustain the law.

The school boards of Raymond and Candia held a meeting March 23, 1900, with satisfactory results.

The pupils belonging in the Green district, Raymond, were returned to the Patten Hill school for the year. An arrangement equally beneficial to towns and pupils; we hope it may be continued. We acknowledge with pleasure the courteous treatment received from the Raymond school board in our joint work in the East Candia and Patten Hill schools.

Necessary repairs have been made on all school houses.

At Charmingfare the amount appropriated, ($100), was, on inspection by your committee, and competent carpenters, deemed insufficient. It was considered wiser to repair the house thoroughly at an additional cost, which was done. A fine picture of Frances Willard, a gift of Mrs. J. L. Fitts, adorns this room. New seats have been placed in the Village school-house. It seems unfortunate that the town owns so little land near this house. Children should have a play ground, and the sanitary conditions of all our school-houses should be of vital importance. Vaccination and other precautions against disease, are of little effect, if this is neglected.

It would seem important to consider the advisability of the present text book system, if the deadly microbe may be conveyed from one pupil to another in the interchange of books. Minor repairs have been made on other houses, in addition to those of last year. The Tower Hill house has been shingled. A new floor laid at North Road, with other repairs; curtains placed in the Island house, hitching posts here and elsewhere. At the Corner, the house was banked, glass set, stove moved from the platform to the floor, some of the front seats removed, thus making the room more commodious and comfortable. A portion of the repair money is reserved as a nucleus for more extended repairs on this house.

At the Hill, repairs have been made; a framed picture of Frances Willard was presented this school by Miss F. F. Adams. The interior of all the school-houses has been beautified by the combined efforts of teachers, pupils and friends. Framed pictures of Washington, Longfellow and Whittier, adorn the walls, with many others unframed—but beautiful and instructive. Thus the pupil is surrounded, in the school room, with an atmosphere of art, and whether his school life be long or short, his reading, history, literature, indeed his life work, will command more of the conscious effort and enthusiasm, because he will discover, that they are the interpreters of the school environment, as they are the interpreters of the world of man; for contact with which his school experience should be preparing him.

The "White Ribbon" literature—excellent supplementary reading—has been regularly distributed at each school by representatives of the W. C. T. U. It would seem well to tender a vote of thanks from the town to that worthy organization for thus helping to implant the principles of virtue, temperance and right living. The pupils of the Hill school, with their teacher and a member of the school board, have contributed and sent money sufficient to pay for a window in a school house in process of erection in Okayama, Japan, as a result of listening to the lecture of Mrs. J. H. Pattee, a missionary from this state to that country.

Our teachers! We have endeavored to supply the best talent possible, and have engaged only those who were considered eminently qualified to fill the positions not alone in point of education but of character. We must bear in mind that the real work of securing the best teachers for our rural schools, is done by improving educational conditions in the community, for the higher the qualifications possessed by a teacher, the more certain is he or she to seek and find employment in graded schools. Let us not think that the ability to pass a severe examination is an absolute test of teaching power, or of that divine gift which enables the teacher to touch the spiritual nature of the child, so that the result shall be a beautiful and masterful character. Already there are indications which point to a still brighter future for our rural schools. Public thought and interest are focused upon them, as a means of developing personal character. Our great men and women, and great institutions, are moving to adjust popular education to meet the needs and conditions of rural communities.

Let us hope that the twentieth century will mark an era for still greater accomplishments in the schools of Candia.

Respectfully submitted,
